

You don't have to stop being a parent while you are in a residential treatment facility.

Your parental rights

When a child is in foster care for an extended period of time, a social services or foster care agency can file a petition to terminate a parent's rights and free the child for adoption. However, the law allows the agency to decide not to file for termination of parental rights under certain circumstances, such as when the child is living with a relative foster parent, when there is a compelling reason why termination is not in the child's best interests. and when the parent is incarcerated or in a residential substance abuse treatment program and has maintained a meaningful role in the child's life. These decisions are made on a case-by-case basis, with a focus on the best interests of the child.

If your child is in foster care, you have the right to:

- Identify an appropriate person you would like to care for your child, such as a relative or friend.
- Be informed about the foster care agency responsible for your child's care, the name of your child's caseworker, and how to contact the caseworker and his/her supervisor.
- Know how to reach your family caseworker, if that person is different from your child's caseworker.
- Participate in planning for your child.
- Take advantage of services to help you address the issues that led to your child's placement in foster care (parenting classes, substance abuse treatment, etc.).
- Participate in meetings about your Family Service Plan, which should address the special challenges facing you and your family due to your placement in a treatment facility.
- Receive information about family visiting and other services that can help you build a meaningful relationship with your child during and after your time in treatment.
- Visit with your child, unless a court order prohibits visits. Ask about video/teleconferencing if in-person visits are not possible.
- Be kept up to date on your child's health, development, and progress in school.
- Be informed about court proceedings and attend them, if possible.
- Be assigned an attorney, if you are financially eligible.

You have the responsibility to:

- Make regular contact with your child and/or the foster care agency.
 Although this can be difficult while you are in a treatment facility, you are expected to make efforts to communicate with your child unless a court order prevents this. You must be able to show your caseworker and the judge that you have made this effort.
- Show that you're planning for your child's future. Identify someone who can care for your child while you are away.
- Stay in touch with your child's caseworker, your family caseworker, and your attorney. If you haven't had contact with the caseworker, Social Services, or the foster care agency for six months, it can be considered abandonment of your child and a petition could be filed to terminate your parental rights.
- Complete any programs your Family Service Plan requires.
- Participate in Family Court proceedings. Contact your attorney if you are unable to attend a court proceeding. Make sure your attorney has copies of all of your relevant documents.
